

Global Studies House

A Living Learning Community

Global Studies House is a special living-learning community for incoming first-year students dedicated to developing global perspectives. Programming in the house will engage residents in experiences and dialogue with the goal of fostering a global community consciousness. Students interested in belonging to this community are not expected to have extensive knowledge or experience with global issues, however a genuine interest in engaging international perspectives, enriching cultural experiences and empowering community action is essential.

Students living in the Global Studies House will interact regularly with faculty across the university. Using examples and blending perspectives from popular culture, historical contexts, current practices and groundbreaking research, we will work to create a foundation for global exploration. Living in the Global Studies House is a special opportunity for selected students to broaden their experiences beyond the classroom and explore issues critical to becoming globally educated citizens.

Students must preference Global Studies on the Housing Application and fill out and submit this supplemental application. Regarding questions about the Global Studies program or application process please contact Emily Half, ehalf@andrew.cmu.edu or 412.268.2075.
